Bradshaw Kirchofer Presents New Collection That Celebrates a Royal Delivery

'St Andrews' Line Inspired By Kate and William, Named After Place The Couple Met

(Torrance, Calif. – July 1, 2013) – The royal baby is set to arrive in July, and rumor mills are already buzzing about what Kate Middleton's favorite nursery picks will be. Designed for the Duchess of Cambridge, the St Andrews Collection from luxury handmade furniture company Bradshaw Kirchofer (<http://www.bradshawkirchofer.com/>) launches just in time for Kate's delivery.

Inspired by royalty and with understated elegance, the St Andrews Collection was named after the place Kate and William met, at St Andrews University in Scotland. Featuring a soft palette of ocean aqua, whisper beige and a blushing, vintage pink, the line boasts artisan-applied craftsmanship for a lightly distressed, care-worn look reminiscent of English classics.

“Our designers and the general public agree, there’s something captivating about Kate, William and their expected little one,” said Marketing Manager Lisa Faulkner. “We are excited to pay tribute to the Royal Family and to our own British heritage with this gorgeous, new line of children’s furniture.”

The collection features a range of mix-and-match furniture pieces, such as a day bed, twin bed, dressers, side tables and a tall wardrobe. Other special features include curved lines, ornate, gold crown accents and intricate, hand-carved wood patterns. Made from 100 percent natural, solid pine, the St Andrews Collection may look vintage, but it’s sturdy enough to last a lifetime.

Head Furniture Designer Ann Bradshaw Kirchofer created a new furniture line for the birth of each of her three sons. She doesn’t plan to have more children, but felt inspired by the news of a royal birth and put pen to paper to create this luxurious collection that was six months in the making.

“Our furniture has a story and a rich aesthetic to bring charm and character to your home,” said Faulkner. “As Kate and William welcome their bundle of joy into their family, we hope that you enjoy our whimsical St Andrews line, and consider introducing the pieces into your own home.”
